Grid Upgrades Keep GTMO Powered Up

By JOSH John Cokos

Naval Media Center, Guantanamo Bay

Don't get too upset about the power outages we experience, it could be worse. Guantanamo Bay's power grid is completely independent and routine maintenance is important in keeping the power on. The grid in GTMO is about the same size as one in a small town in the United States, however stateside grids can draw power from other sources if there's a power failure. A small power outage in the United States isn't necessarily a major concern, but in GTMO it's more serious, and affects a greater number of people.

"Our grid is recovering from years of underfunding, but several improvements are on the way," said Cmdr. Eric Denfeld, Public Works Department Officer.

The Pilot Sensor System is one of the upgrades Denfeld Plans on installing. The system locates problems within the grid allowing workers to isolate them and avoid major power outages. Wind turbines, and two four-megawatt generators are also in the works. The turbines and generators, Denfeld added, will work more efficiently than the smaller multiple generators used now.

Most of the sporadic power outages come from a mixture of moisture and dust collecting on the insulators, causing the insulators to overheat. The result is an endless number of problems.

Public works is preparing for improvements, Denfeld said, but all the major changes will take place in about a year, making power outages in GTMO a thing of the past.

They're Staying

During the month of May, several Navy personnel in GTMO decided to extend their military careers. Some reenlisted for orders, while others decided to take the oath because it felt like the right thing to do.

Congratulations to you all on your decision to Stay Navy!

Memorial Day Beach Fest 2004

Laughter, excitement and good old fashion fun was in the air as the Memorial Day Beach Fest kicked off the summer season.

The day began with a 5K Fun Run over the back roads of the Windmill Beach area. By 10 a.m., Windmill Beach was filled with beachgoers of all ages. The wide assortment of activities to keep everyone busy included scavenger hunts, Jenga tournaments, the rock wall, and bungee jumping for the kids.

Beach volleyball, domino tournaments, horseshoe competition, target golf and the NFL Quarterback Challenge kept the adults busy until late in the afternoon.

Those not involved with the competitions had the chance to sit and relax with family and friends while enjoying something cool to drink, a snack and the awesome sounds of GTMO's very own "Least Worst Band."

The event was definitely a great way to start the summer season off right.

And the tournament winners are. . .

Exercise Sharpens Emergency Response Skills

A recent combined effort between the U.S. Naval Base, Guantanamo Bay, and Joint Task Force GTMO resulted in a mass casualty training exercise held at McCalla Hanger and adjacent buildings.

"This particular type of evolution keeps everyone sharp on how to handle a mass casualty and is a great training experience for medical and other departments on base," said CMDCM Dave Peck, U.S. Naval Hospital.

The exercise resulted in the treatment of over 32 victims with simulated injuries ranging from bumps and bruises to third degree burns.

The majority of the patients were treated on scene and transported to the hospital for further care. The lesser wounded patients were sent to the Kittery Beach Joint Aid Station for treatment.

Industrial Hygiene Tech Randall Perry of USNH GTMO applies make-up to Spc. Maurice Jackson, one of the volunteer victims during the recent mass casualty training exercise.

MA1 Leon Sandstorm and MA2 Michael Whitehead of Naval Station Security maintain communications with all assets at the Emergency Command Center.

JTF Infantry and NAVBASE Firefighters join efforts in carrying a simulated casualty to a first aid station.

HN Christina Currie and HM3 Jarod Cardona from the USNH ER offer assistance to HM2 Robert Thorpe from the Detention Hospital and a volunteer victim.

Memorial Day 2004

Memorial Day began as Decoration Day, a springtime tradition of widows decorating with flowers the graves of confederate soldiers who died in battle in 1898, with General Order No. 1, Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, General John A. Logan designated May 30 as a day to decorate the graves of comrades who died defending their country.

Here in Guantanamo Bay, thousands of miles from the grand ceremonies in our nation's capital, residents gathered at the annual Memorial Day ceremony at Cuzco Cemetery. Here, those in attendance bowed their heads and remembered the proud patriots who made the ultimate sacrifice in defense of liberty.

Left: After the Navy's Color Guard lowered the flag to half-mast, the silence in the cemetery was broken only by the mournful sounds of a bugler MA3 Justin Young playing Taps.

W.T. Sampson to Host Transit of Venus Viewing

On Tuesday, June 8, GTMO residents will be able to witness a very rare astronomical phenomenon when the planet Venus lines up directly between Earth and the Sun.

W.T. Sampson High School is sponsoring a viewing of the Transit of Venus on Tuesday, June 8 beginning at sunrise, approximately 6:20 - 7:20 a.m. During this time, Venus will cross in front of the Sun.

Viewed from Earth, Venus will appear as a black dot moving slowly from left to right across the southernmost part of the Sun's bright disc. With a diameter of approximately 12,103 km, 114 Venus sized circles could fit across the full width of the Sun.

Occurrences of transits of Venus follow an unusual pattern. The last one was in 1882, a gap of 121 years until the event in 2004. Then in 2125, Venus will be in transit again (8 years later). However, we are going to have to wait another 105 years until the next transit of Venus in 2117, then 2125 and then 2247!

The Venus transit is an important astronomical event and is this year's theme of NASA's Sun-Earth Day organization. Most of the transit will be observed earlier by locations on the other side of the Earth; however, Guantanamo Bay viewers will be able to view the last hour of Venus crossing in front of the Sun just after sunrise on June 8. More information about participating observatories, Sousa's Venus Transit March, and activities in history, technology, music mathematics, and astronomy, can be found at the NASA website: http://sunearth.gsfc.nasa.gov/sunearthday/2004/index_vthome.htm

The history about Venus and the transit sightings is extensive. Some of the significant points include:

- * In 1610, Galileo was the first person to see Venus as more than just a bright point of light in the sky using his four-centimeter, (1.6 inch) 3 to 33 power, telescope.

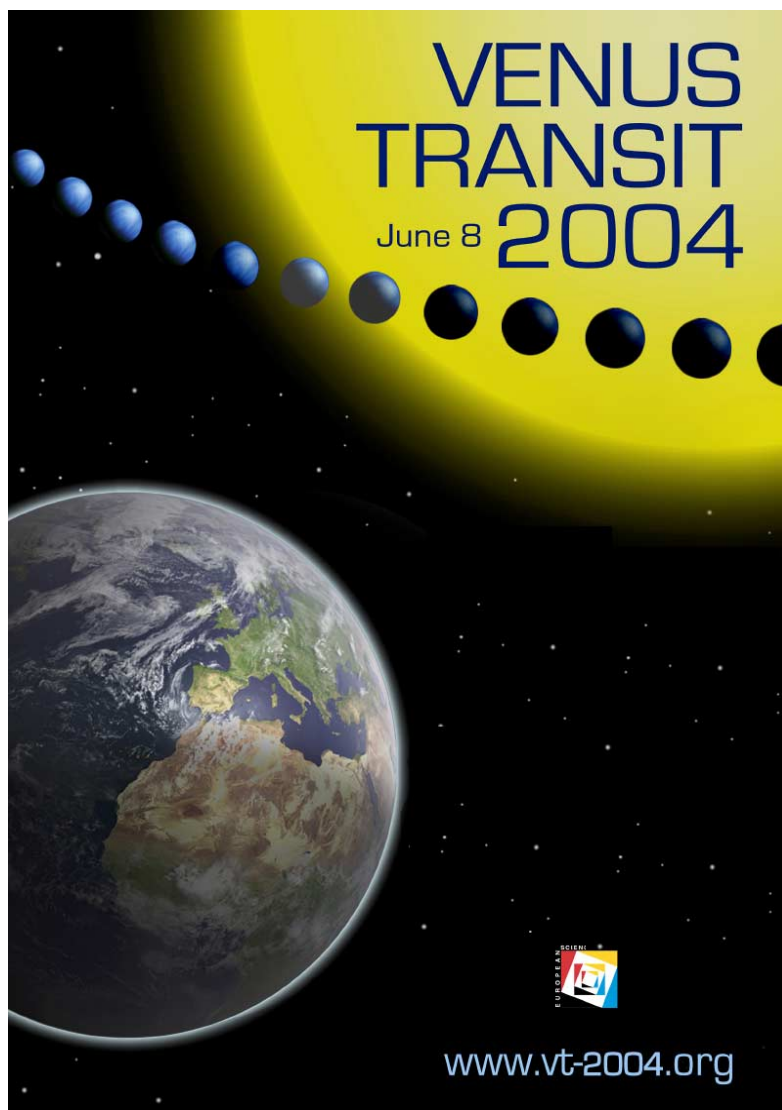

- * In 1663, Reverend James Gregory, a mathematician, suggested using the Venus transit as a way to more accurately measure the Earth to Sun distance.

- * In 1667, Sir Edmund Halley published a paper detailing the parallax technique using the Venus transit measurements as a method to compute the Earth-Sun distance.

- * In 1761, Russian astronomer, Mikhail Lomonosov discovered a halo around Venus during the transit from which he deduced that Venus had an atmosphere.

- * In 1882, The President's Own band director, John Philip Sousa was so fascinated with the Venus transit that he wrote the Venus Transit March.

- * In 1882, one of the best sites for viewing and photographing the transit by the American Astronomical team, led by Professor Simon Newcomb, was at the Hugvenot Seminary for Girls in Wellington, South Africa. The Seminary was begun by two teachers from the Mount Holyoke Seminary in Massachusetts, a school for the Christian education of girls. Miss Abbie Ferguson and Miss Anna Bliss, both later to gain their doctoral degrees, established the Seminary with a curriculum that included a class in astronomy, and built an observatory that housed a donated six-inch, Fitz telescope.

- * In 1882, David Peck Todd, photographer, used new photographic techniques to take a few of the negatives that still survive of that transit.

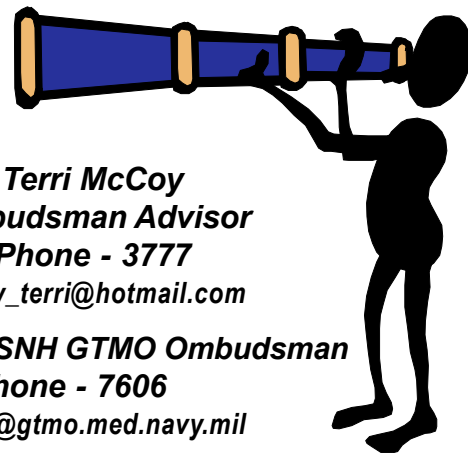

This is also an opportunity for mass participation in astronomy – through simple but safe telescope or pinhole camera observations and with the World Wide Web images to be broadcast from all over the planet, the 2004 Transit of Venus is a truly global event. More people than ever will be able to participate directly in observing this rare phenomenon.

On Tuesday, June 8, Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, residents take the opportunity to view the Venus transit through telescopes that would astonish Galileo.

Please join the school staff on June 8 at the high school football field for a special viewing of Venus and the Sun through solar filtered telescopes. Anyone wanting to set up his or her own telescope is welcome to do so. For more information about the viewing, contact Guy Belleman at 3500 or 2360.

Start Thinking About Those Scholarships!

Have a child entering their final year of high school this fall? Summer is the perfect time to start thinking about applying for scholarships to help finance their college education. The Defense Commissary Agency and Fisher House can help. The two organizations are partners in the Scholarships for Military Children Program.

Commissaries are an integral part of the quality of life offered to service members and their families. The Scholarships for operated by the Defense Commissary Agency worldwide.

The Scholarships for Military Children Program is funded through the generosity of manufacturers and suppliers whose products are sold at military commissaries, worldwide.

The Fisher House Foundation is honored to be involved with the Scholarships for Military Children Program. Fisher House provides a "Home Away from Home" near military medical centers for families experiencing a personal medical crisis and is one of the premiere quality of life organizations supporting military families. The Foundation volunteered to underwrite the administration of this program.

At least one $1,500 will be awarded at every commissary location where qualified applications are received. The scholarship provides for payment of tuition, books, lab fees and room and board.

During your summer vacation, check the programs website at www.militaryscholar.org for a 2005 application and get answers to some frequently asked scholarship questions.

Military Children Program was created in recognition of the contributions of military families to the readiness of the fighting force and to celebrate the role of the commissary in the military family community. It is the intent of the program that a scholarship funded through contributions be awarded annually for each commissary
